The U.K. Coal Strike: Nothing to Celebrate

By Bob Hagerty Hernational Herald Tribund

LONDON — Last August, when British coalminers still thought they could win their strike, a Scottish miner's wife paused with dish towel in hand to ponder the consequences of defeat.

"if we lose," the Scotswoman said, "they'll have us back to the days when you had to doff your cap to the boss.

Like most predictions about the 51-week strike, that one probably will not come true. The Conservative government has achieved a notable victory in subduing the National Union of Mineworkers, traditionally considered Britain's fiercest union. But even Conservative Party loyalists caution against concluding that the victory will transform the attitudes of British

Aside from its considerable eco-

In certain areas, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government appears to be the clear winner.

"One lesson is that the country can survive a long coal strike" without disastrous consequences for the economy, said Christopher Johnson, economic adviser to Lloyds Bank, Britain's fourth-largest bank. In 1974, a much shorter coal strike caused such disruption that it belped bring down the Conserva-tive government of Prime Minister Edward Heath.

Now, Mr. Johnson said, the alled coal strike has demonstrated that most of Britain's trade unions are not prepared to act collectively to press one another's aims.

Others are more skeptical. Anthony Sampson, author of the "Anatomy of Britain" series, contended that the strike may prove to be a Pyrrhic victory for Mrs. Thatcher. The costs included the added use of fuel oil at power stations and the deployment of thousands of policemen to try to keep order in the coalfields. In all, the stockbrokerage of Phillips & Drew estimates, the strike costs added £2.5 billion ($2.7 billion) to the public sector borrowing requirement, a broad measure of Britain's government

A more serious worry is that the coal board will have trouble winning back customers that have grown used to using imported coal or oil and do not wish to risk another disruption in supplies. The coal board said about 900 miners went back to work Monday. Speaking on a television pro-gram, Mr. Scargill said be was "so proud" of the miners that "I am bursting." Their 51-week strike was the longest major industrial dispute in British history. Union delegates voted Sunday by a narrow margin to return to work Tuesday without an agree-ment about mine closures with the state-run National Coal Board. The vote went against the recommendations of the executive committee of the union and of Mr.

The delegates made their decision after a surge back to work by thousands of miners in recent weeks. Only about 90,000 miners were still on strike before Sunday's meeting, according to coal board

Israel, whose troops have been ambushed repeatedly in the area around Tyre, has repeatedly warned that it would act to protect the lives of its soldiers in southern Lebanon. It has said that the crackdown in recent days was a response to an escalation in Shiite attacks on its troops. At least 133 guerrilla attacks against Israelis and their allies were reported in February, and 17 have been reported this month.

There was no report of the shooting of the Lebanese boy from Israeli officials. Shamir Backs Cabinet on Second Pullback

But Israeli Official Indicates Reservations on Supporting Final Withdrawal

By Edward Walsh and Jim Hoagland

Washington Past Service
JERUSALEM — The Israeli cabinet decision Sunday to order the second stage of its troop withdrawal from southern Lebanon was supported this time by Yitzhak Shamir, the foreign minister and leader of the rightist Likud bloc in the national unity government.

Mr. Shamir said he reversed his earlier vote opposing the withdrawal plan because there was "no use in making proposals without any chance of getting them through the cabinet.

But Mr. Shamir, in an interview, stressed that he still had doubts about the wisdom of the timing of the withdrawal. He indicated that he was reserving judgment on sup-porting the final stage of withdraw-al to the international border until he learned how the army proposed to protect civilians living in northern Israel from terrorist attack.

"I hope the army will find an answer to this before we reach the international border," Mr. Shamir said. "We still have a few months." Mr. Shamir was prime minister in the previous Likud government and is due to return to that office

The second stage that was authorized Sunday calls for the Israeli Army to evacuate positions in eastem Lebanon and to pull back to a line that runs just north of the town of Hasbaya. The first stage of the withdrawal, in which Israeli troops left the Lebanese port city of Sidon and the surrounding area in the west, was accomplished Feb. 16.

The first and second stage pull-backs will still leave the Israeli Army well north of the border, posing no immediate threat to northern Israel. Thus, the second stage vote was neither as risky nor as controversial as a decision to complete the withdrawal plan will be.

Nevertheless, Sunday's unanimous cabinet vote was evidence of the strong sentiment in Israel to complete the withdrawal as soon as possible. The only indication of continuing opposition came from two former Likud defense ministers — Ariel Sharon, now the min-ister of industry and trade, and Moshe Arens, now a minister with-

U.S. High Court Rules Indians Can Pursue Claim

WASHINGTON — The Su-preme Court, in a decision Monday that could have profound impact on Indian land claims throughout the eastern United States, narrowly upheld the right of the Oneida Indi ans to pursue a 189-year-old claim in New York. The court ruled, 5 to 4, that the Indians had a right to pursue their claim against two New York counties and were not barred by a stat-

The case at the court was a narrow one, involving 872 acres (about 350 hectares) in Madison and Oneida counties in New York and the use of the land by the counties, mostly as highway, for two years. However, the issues are similar or identical to other cases in the eastern United States in which a large amount of land is at dispute. In an opinion written by Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., the court said "the Indians' common-law right to sue is firmly established."

"Having determined that the Oneidas have a cause of action under federal common law," Justice Powell wrote, "we address the question of whether there are defenses available to the counties, we conclude that none has merit."

After the Coal Strike

Decisive events are rare in Britain's econ- over cannot be predicted, with currency omy. The normal reaction to challenges has been to shuffle and compromise, or else to fudge the issues. The resolution of the yearlong coal strike has departed from this mold. The longer-term implications may be mixed. But it represents a major victory for Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government.

The dispute was about the right of the government, acting through the state Coal Board, to decide where to close moneylosing pits. The Mineworkers' Union denied this right, despite the promise of reasonable treatment for the threatened miners. On the local level, miners refused to concede that the tightly knit mining communities should be broken up, however compassionately; at the central level, miners were led by a persuasive thinker with Marxist underpinnings who did not believe in a market economy and who therefore rejected what economists call the principle of comparative advantage.

The miners are going back, but without conceding the state's right to run the industry on market principles. They see them-selves as having been ground down by the remorseless financial pressure of a year-long strike, yet living to fight another day. They threaten local actions to oppose specific pit closures as they are announced.

This reaction is hardly surprising. But whether, in the foreseeable future, the morale of the financially battered miners or the state of the world energy market will be conducive to such rearguard protest actions is highly uncertain.

We believe the first winner of this battle is the British economy. Whether the pound will recover durably now that the strike is markets in their present confusion - but it would if this were a rational world. We are less certain about the political fallout. If another election were approaching. Mrs. Thatcher would benefit enormously, just as she benefited from the "Falklands factor" in the last election. But the next vote is probably far off, and much can happen. More disturbing may be the effect of the miners' strike on the general configuration of British politics. There has been a basic refusal of the center-left — the increasingly conservative majority of the labor unions to support their more extreme colleagues. As a result, the left may become increasingly splintered. The far left, led by Anthony Benn, may turn viciously on the moderates who refused to provide any meaningful support for the strike. And this may lead to yet another step toward the disintegration of the already weakened Labor Party.

British democracy will not prosper if the traditional two-party system breaks down. The danger now is that while the left is splitting the right might do the same, because the need for party discipline will seem less. It is very doubtful whether, in a time of difficulty, Britain would prosper from such an unknown political configuration.

But surely it would have been worse if the Thatcher government had been obliged to concede the principle that people have the right to decide where they want to work and to demand that the rest of the population subsidize them if they choose an unprofit-able occupation — which is what the British miners were demanding.

INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE

Why Tout South Africa?

There may be a hidden purpose in the zigzag maneuvers of South Africa's president, Pieter W. Botha, He may be embarked on an effort to camouflage what is most outrageous in the apartheid system — the denial of all political rights to 21 million blacks. Or just possibly, he hopes that some modest reforms may acquire a momentum of their own and begin to enfranchise blacks. But if that is his vision, as some of his countrymen hope and others complain, he conceals it well - even from his well-wishers in the Reagan administration.

The best that can be said for now is that Mr. Botha is all over the lot. He promises blacks some form of "participation" and he talks vaguely about changing their legal status as "citizens" of the bogus tribal homelands. He has suspended some of the forced evictions of blacks from areas designated for whites. But he not only refuses to bargain directly with any opponents of apartheid, such as the Unit-ed Democratic Front, he also threatens to try them for treason. Put the best possible face on all this and you have a case of a leader struggling to find ways to ameliorate the lot of the millions whom his government intends forever to treat as chattels. Call him locked into an evil condition, a man more humane than his policies. But why should the U.S. government be the foremost champion of his alleged reforms? Why should it resist the efforts to dissociate Americans from this hateful system and to ostracize its sponsors? Why insist on a "constructive" diplomatic engagement that then has to be justified by celebrating every alleged reform? The only respectable explanation is that some wider American interests of security and diplomacy require it. There is a fair chance, it is said, that by preserving influence in Pretoria the United States can help to end bush wars in Mozambique and Angola, thereby ridding southern Africa of Soviet-bloc influence. South Africa has already struck a deal with Marxist Mozambique, and a truce of sorts prevails in Angola. Perhaps all this foreshadows a larger bargain in which South Africa gives up its illegal occupation of Namibia and gives the leftist regime of Angola cause for dismissing the 25,000 Cuban troops that have protected it against tribal antagonists. This hard-boiled calculation, however, has a soft center. Pretoria is not being nice to its black neighbors as a favor to President Reagan. It wants to end its isolation in Africa and make it worthwhile for even Marxist neighbors to withhold aid from South African gnerrillas in need of sanctuaries. This defensive diplomacy is openly acknowledged by President Botha. Insofar as Americans function as a useful intermediary, they are helping South Africa, not benefiting from its help.

Thus the puzzle remains. In the name of realism, the Reagan administration argues that pressure on South Africa is unlikely to hasten constructive change. In the name of fairness, it points to some recent progress, such as desegregation in factories and the rise of black trade unions. But the touting does not stop at that. When Mr. Botha offers a political crumb to nonwhites, the State Department rushes to discover "a new dynamic for char

That is not the language of analysis but of advertising, and on behalf of a regime that has ample resources to conduct its own public relations. The American apologias are neither effective in South Africa nor prudent in the rest of the world. If Mr. Botha intends to dismantle apartheid, let him prove it.

The Pressure on Managua

The Reagan administration, increasing its threats to Nicaragua, has scored an important victory. Managua's announcement that a first group of 100 Cuban military advisers will leave the country in May and that purchases of new military equipment are indefinitely suspended gives partial satisfaction to U.S. demands.

But the Sandinists have taken a big step But the Sandinists have taken a big step backward. Had they announced the staged departure of all the Cuban advisers in Nicaragua, Managua could have made a similar call for the withdrawal of all foreign military advisers in the Central American region. In El Salvador, U.S. advisers are helping the government in their war against the guerrillas, and in Honduras, the United States has set up a major military infrastructure that makes that nation a possible future base of operations. nation a possible future base of operations.

The Sandinists view their concessions as major ones. But these moves might also encourage the Reagan administration to pursue and intensify the strategic tension that places the Sandinists on the defensive. - Le Monde (Paris).

The New Zealand Principle

Norway and Denmark have long refused nuclear weapons. Belgium and Holland have been dithering as to whether to accept cruise missiles. Greece threatens to remove four U.S. bases. A Labor-ruled Britain would probably do the same. Yet all these governments expect the United States to defend them, and to pay a higher cost for doing so. They cannot therefore be surprised if the United States pressures them to share the burden more equally.

1910: Will Taft Stand on Trish Soil? NEW YORK - It seems that a serious discussion has arisen as to the propriety of President W.H. Taft accepting the invitation of the Irish Fellowship Club of Chicago to "stand on Irish soil" when he delivers his address on St. Patrick's Day. The club intended it to be a sur-prise, but it leaked out after the departure of the steamer St. Louis with "Irish soil" and shamrocks. Legal wiseacres declare that it would be a breach of the Constitution for the President to step on foreign soil, which the transplanted grass plot would be. This objec-tion need not be taken seriously. But there are likely to be some nice squabbles among the Irish, many of whom are offended at the idea of an attempt to place Ireland, even if only a small portion of it, in a foreign country.

1935: Britain to Raise Arms Spending

LONDON - The British government served notice [on March 4] of its plans for increased expenditures on armament, in view of the state of international politics and the increased armaments of other powers, particularly Germany. The warning was contained in a "white paper" addressed to the Parliament and signed by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald. The white paper" said, in part: "Public opinion in this country has tended to assume that nothing is required for the maintenance of peace excepting the existing international political machinery, and that other methods of defense - navies, armies, air forces - are no longer required. The force of world events, however, has shown ... that we have far to go before we can find complete security."

Writing the Ugliness Out of the Budget

By Archibald L. Gillies

Mr. Reagan says Americans are "on the verge of greatness." But the facts show us an ugly America — a facts show us an ugly America — a nation driven by uncharacteristic paranoia, questing for cluster military superiority, mindless of the daugers of huge deficits, disregarding human needs at home and abroad.

On the one hand, the administration calls for major cuts in domestic programs that will adversely affect nearly every American, particularly women, children, students, the elderly, farmers and city dwellers. On the other, it asks for broad increases in weaponry, which will destabilize what is left of deterrence, abrogate existing arms control treaties and threaten America's allies as much as its supposed enemies. All this is to be paid for, if not by domestic cuts, then by new levels of deficit spending that will add to the largest accumulation of debt any president has ever bequeathed future generations.

Some members of the administrasome members or the administra-tion consider the military portion of the budget sacrosanct. They should remember Dwight D. Eisenhower's words: "The problem in defense is how far you can go without destroy-ing from within that which you are trying to defend from without."

Must America put at risk the es-sential goodness of its character? Most it become a militarized society! No. The nation's obsession with military strength wounds the economy. A wiser approach could start with eliminating waste in Pentagon procure-ment, which would save millions, even billions. But it should not stop there. Much more could safely be saved by a more common-sense approach to the most basic issues of national security.

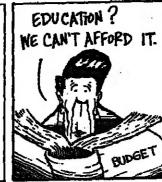

Since the planet's life-support system could be destroyed by as few as 250 nuclear warheads, why deploy 10,000 now and build 4,000 more by 1988? If the goal is to deter nuclear war, wny spend nearly $20 billion this budget year to deploy destabilizing first-strike weapons like the Trident D-5, MX and Pershing-2 missiles, which will only increase the first-strike weapons the trident breadent's rhetoric. D-5, MX and Pershing-2 missies, which will only increase the likeli-hood of war? If America's real aim is to try to influence Soviet behavior, it should offer promises of military restraint, expanded trade and more scientific exchanges.

If Western Europe is the world's largest economic entity, with a com-bined gross national product exceeding America's, why must the United States spend more than $130 billion annually for European defense, surely a disproportionate percentage of the Atlantic alliance's total defense spending? Why, in any case, after 40 years of peace and nearly two de-cades of East-West détente, is it necessary for the United States to deploy more than 300,000 troops and 6,000 tactical nuclear weapons in Europe? If Washington's goal is to prevent war, it should initiate troop reductions and remove nuclear weapons from Central Europe. If the real U.S. concern is to preserve the alliance, Washington should deal with the ma-jor irritants in American-European relations; high U.S. interest rates, for example, and creeping protectionism on both sides.

If Third World countries - conservative or radical - want normal political and trade relations with the United States and pose no military threat, why spend $59 billion annual-ly on forces that would intervene in those countries? If the U.S. goal is to minimize Soviet influence, why push countries like Nicaragua into Moscow's arms? If Americans truly wish to promote democracy and stability, they should end military support of dictators and promote international programs of economic assistance, including major debt relief, that would reduce social inequities, strengthen the political fabric of these countries and increase their capacity to buy reorientation in foreign policy. Such an approach could save $470 billion over the next five years and upward of $1 trillion during the succeeding five. One and one-half trillion dollars, spent wisely over the next decade, would let America move against many problems that now seem insoluble. This could help reduce the deficit, modernize basic in-dustries, help finance high-tech development and retrain displaced workers. America could begin to rebuild its roads and bridges, its hous-ing stock and, above all, its citizens' dignity. We could avoid an ugly America and make possible once again a growing, competitive and

Do you remember Frank Capra's 1941 film "Meet John Doe"? Gary Cooper, playing a nameless representative of an America that is unemployed and numbed by the Depres-sion, and muffled by the razzmatazz of Washington, promises to jump off the top of City Hall to make his country see the misery of the "little gry." It must not take that kind of desperation to force us into action against the Reagan program.

Deficits: Using Longevity to Beat the Bloody Things

N EW YORK — The story went around during the glum diplomatic dog days in the late 1930s. The 13-year-old son asks his father, a retired senior diplomat: "Daddy, what was your role in the world war?" Lord Cecil looked up from his newspaper: "I tried to prevent the

to prevent the bloody thing.
Critics of big spending (and friends of high taxation) have been heard from ad infinitum on the subject, this writer included. But as the story unfolds - the story of trying to lower federal spending by trimming the grants to the Minne-apolis Ballet — one heeds wise men's counsel.

Four years ago, Irving Kristol, the distinment, observed that shirttail-type budget cuts tend to generate opposition out of proportion to their yield. You can — the analysis goes — make it to the wire and succeed, say, in trimming food-stamp spending, but by the time you have completed that race you will arrive out of breath, and the enemy, once weak and disorganized, will be the study of longevity.

For every decade, beginning in 1940, Americans' life expectancy increased by about one year. This was so until 1970, when life expectancy began to increase more quickly. The increase between 1970 and 1980 was on the order of 1.2 years. And from 1980 to 1985, by extrapolation, the figure would be about half a year. Adding these figures together, one sees that since the inception of Social Security, the human life cycle has advanced by about four years.

Suppose that the implications of that longevity schedule were uniformly applied, where relevant to federal disbursements? Suppose, even, that it were done gradually, say a year at a time.

This would mean that Social Security refirement would begin this year not at 65 but at 66, and, correspondingly, early retirement would be-

In federal service, where retirement is now permitted after 20 years (at age 60), that figure would rise next year to 21, and on up to 25. The ad hoc and complicated formulas (2 percent of pay per year of service and all the variations), could easily be adjusted. In the army, retirement is permitted after 20 years' service, and this also should increase. Time magazine last month cited an example of the scale in which we deal: "In 1983, 90 percent of military retirees were younger than 50, and some 200,000 of them were 'double-dippers,' who had taken new government jobs. Currently, a lieuten-years' service receives $20,480 a year. Critics of the system cite the 1984 Grace Commission report, which said the military pension plan was six times as good as the best private-sector plan."

The attraction of the categorical reform lies in the difficulty one has in arguing against it. The argument ad absurdum tends to reveal this. Suppose that, 50 years from now, the scientists make the average lifetime 100 years. Obviously we would not think in terms of generating an economy that would permit us to retire at the equiva-lent of young middle age, measured back when the average life expectancy was in the 60s.

The pursuit of such a reform has the added advantage that those who oppose it would be a relatively small number, and in a democracy it is realistic to think in terms not only of what is opposition in the Social Security field would, of course, come from 64-year-olds planning to retire at 65 who now need to work another year. and from 61-year-olds who planned to take early retirement the following year but now must work another year.

And, of course, those just a little younger might oppose it. But soon you are talking to folk in their mid-50s, for whom the question of whether they retire at 65 or 70 is a moderately

Two Voices From Out of the Democrats' Wilderness

W ASHINGTON — To the wide-spread belief that the Demo-crats have lost both their voice and their sense of direction, there are now at least two important rebuttals. Governor Mario M. Cuomo of New York, the keynote speaker at last summer's Democratic National Convention, and Senator Gary Hart of Colorado, the leading challenger at the convention, have given speeches that clearly suggest that two potential leaders of the Democratic comeback effort have not lost their compasses or their rhetorical command.

Even though they avoided many of the troublesome specifics, there were differences in emphasis in the speech-es Mr. Hart delivered at Boston's Fancuil Hall last month and Mr. Cuomo gave a few days later at Yale, But it is significant that these two men, stereotyped as the spokesmen for the "revisionist" and "traditionalist" wings of the party, found com-mon ground with each other — and for a challenge to President Reagan.

Obviously there can be no cheap consensus within the Democratic Party based on the perceived conver-gence of two leading figures. The more conservative views of Senator Sam Numn of Georgia or Governor Mark White of Texas, the urban and minority perspectives of Philadelphia's Mayor Wilson Goode or Representative William Gray, have to be blended into the mix before anyone can claim that the Democrats have their act together.

But the Cuomo and Hart speeches do rebut the notion that the Democrats as a species are still reeling in shock from last November's presidential shellacking and do not know which way to turn.

There are four principles on which Mr. Hart and Mr. Cuomo clearly see eye-to-eye. The first is the belief that President Reagan's policies endanger the long-term economic health and social stability of the American society. If events in the next four years prove this view incorrect, then the Democrats' prospects of a 1988 comeback will indeed look bleak. But if the economy sours as a result of soaring deficits and the nation nots, these two Democrats, at least, Perhaps not, but Mr. Hart voiced the will be in a position to say that even when Mr. Reagan was riding high, they told Americans what lay shead. Their rejection of Reaganism extends beyond words to deeds. Mr. Cuomo last week challenged the president to his face, in a White House colloquy on the budget. Mr. Hart, who has consistently voted against Reaganomics, also voted against en-trusting the leadership of the Justice Department to Edwin Meese 3d, who echoes Mr. Reagan's views on social policy and constitutional issues. On all these fronts, the lines are drawn

The second point on which Mr. Hart and Mr. Cuomo agree is that the values for which the Democratic Par-ty has fought for the past 50 years remain valid. "Despite the events of last November, I haven't changed the underlying tenets of my political philosophy." Mr. Cuomo said. "Why should I seek new principles?"

You say this is not surprising from

of Nicaragua, including his statement that the Sandinists have "chased same view. Though saying that we are "in an era of profound transition," he reaffirmed "one of the purest old ideas," the belief that "society as a whole, through our government, has a moral responsibility ... to achieve real justice ... and assure the basic necessities of life." The third point of agreement is that government must conceive itself as a partner in furthering, not frustrating, the powerful forces of economic change and growth. Predict-ably, Mr. Hart emphasized the need for policies that "encourage im-proved productivity" to meet compe-tition in international markets. That is the ideology of a politician from a

Beijing Appears to Back Off Threat Against Hanoi

BELIING - Five weeks ago, the Chinese foreign minister, Wu Xue-qian, warned publicly that China might have to teach Vietnam "a second lesson" if Vietnam did not rein in its troops in Cambodia. It was a blunt threat that China might be preparing to go to war.

"Everything now is riveted to economic development, and any military action would divert resources away from that," a senior Asian diplomat said. A Western diplomat said he has concluded that Mr. Deng and his senior aides - Hu Yaobang, the general secretary of the Communist Party, and Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang - do not want to take military action because to do so would strengthen the political position of opponents of the Beijing regime, particularly within the People's Liberation Army.

New York Fashion World Hailing Fresh Designs of Marc Jacobs, 21

N EW YORK — The search for fashion talent goes on in New York, with increasing success. Since Stephen Sprouse exploded on the fashion scene last spring with truly American, graffitt-inspired ciothes, other young designers have been finding themselves in uncharted fashion territory, which could be the beginning of a differ-ent American market.

This season, Marc Jacobs, 21, is signed a big sweater and had his the most talked-about new designer in New York. His story is almost too good to be true. Jacobs graduated from the Parsons School of Design in April 1984, winning the

Perry Ellis and Chester Weinberg Golden Thimble awards and being named student designer of the year. It was the first time since 1967 that a New Yorker had won all three major American awards for young designers.

Shortly afterward, Jacobs got the backing of the Seventh Avenue manufacturer Reuben Thomas to design a line under the title "Sketchbook." His first spring and summer collection, with sales of $400,000 to $500,000, is in 70 stores in the United States, including Charivari, Bonwit Teller, Macy's, Neiman-Marcus and Saks Fifth Avenue. Henri Bendel plans to sell his clothes next season. Jacobs has also rated ample coverage in the back in a ponytail and with the fashion media, including the front sauntering grace of a gazelle. His Jacobs was also lucky in that Reuben Thomas, a company that was into Establishment beaded evening dresses, was looking for younger talent and a more sporty line. Martin Thomas, who, with his father, owns the company, said: My father was responsible for hiring Jacobs. There is such excitement about him, such sparkle, and at the same time a level-headedness often lacking in creative people.

Also a confidence that he can do exactly anything he wants to do."

Jacobs can be found at his studio on 34th Street in the heart of the Seventh Avenue district. Wearing solid black, he is tall, skinny, dark and handsome, with his hair pulled favorite one-liner is that he makes children's clothes for grown-ups.

German Experts Discuss The Case for Lower Case By Susan J. Smith The Associated Press B ONN — Officials from German Language institutes in interview: The exercise interview: The exercise interview.

B man, language institutes in Wiesbaden and Mannheim met recently at the Conference of State Culture Ministers in Bonn to discuss new proposals for ridding written German of an ancient scourge: all those capital letters. With at least 78 rules governing capitalization of nouns - and almost any word in German can be turned into a norm - the language experts contend that some relax-ation would help make German easier to learn and would do away with ambiguity. Supporters of reform charge that the capitalization of nouns in mod-ern German makes it increasingly difficult for Germans and foreign-ers alike to learn the language. The weekly magazine Der Spiegel remarked last year that even the 18th-century poet Goethe "would not have tested well" in the morass of existing regulations.

Errors occur daily in German schools and offices, even in graffiti on the Berlin Wall. And mistakes in capitalization can dramatically change the meaning of a sentence.

The most celebrated example is "Ich habe in Berlin liebe Genos-sen," meaning "I have dear com-rades in Berlin." If one capitalizes "liebe" and lower-cases "Genossen" the sentence means, "I have enjoyed love in Berlin."

The burden that all this creates for German schoolchildren was recognized in 1908 by Konrad Duden, one of the authors of the Duden lexicons codifying the lan-

Many of the newcomers at the Futures Industry Association conference will be bankers and other members of financial institutions who until a few years ago would never have associat-

But Richard L. Sandor, senior vice president of Drexel Burn-ham Lambert Inc., observed last week:

As for the foreign accents at the meeting, they will reflect the growing international scope of the futures business.

"While the commodities futures business has always been a global affair, it is only in the last year or so that the financial and stock index markets have leaped frontiers," said John M. Dam-gard, president of FIA, a Washington-based trade group. Among the international linkages effected or initiated in the past year are those between the Chicago Board of Trade and the

London International Financial Futures Exchange; the Chicago

Mercantile and Singapore Monetary exchanges; New York's. Commodity Exchange and the Sydney Futures Exchange, and the Philadelphia Stock Exchange and the Hong Kong Futures

Basically, there are two kinds of linkages. The Chicago Merc-

Singapore linkage, for example, permits a gold futures contract bought on the Chicago exchange to be sold in Singapore or vice versa. In the case of the Chicago Board-LIFFE arrangement, the London exchange received permission to trade the Chicago Board's highly successful Treasury bond contract.

- "But these linkages are not without potential legal and regula-tory problems," Mr. Damgard noted. "Many of our members are unfamiliar with foreign legal systems and market regulation, two topics that will definitely be discussed at Boca Raton."

The most sensitive topic, however, will be the problem of "andit trails," a trade euphemism for tracking the timing of trades. It is a sensitive subject because traders on the futures exchange floors traditionally execute orders for both their own accounts and those of outside hedgers and speculators.

"It's a very tough issue, but maybe the Chicago Board Options Exchange has the answer," Mr. Damgard said, noting that floor members there can trade for their own and outside accounts, but

Don L. Horwitz, of the law firm of Kaye, Scholer, Fierman, Hays & Handler, said:

"The futures industry should seize upon the current investigation of the audit trails process by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission as an opportunity to settle the matter once

He continued: "While the CFTC may be on the right track, their solutions may not be the answer to the problem. For example, most of us in the industry cannot see, given the volatility in many of the futures markets, how exchanges can impose a one-minute time stamping of orders. It won't work, nor will the

Dollar Rises in Europe

Central Banks Remain Inactive

The Associated Press LONDON - The U.S. dollar rose against most other major cur-rencies in European trading Mon-day as central banks refrained from najor dollar sales.

Currency dealers said there was no repeat of last week's concerted intervention by European central banks, during which the banks sold more than $2 billion in a bid to drive the dollar lower.

The effort worked for one ses-sion, with the U.S. currency suffering one of its worst one-day de-clines in years. But the dollar then rehounded late last week. While there was no evidence of sibility that the central banks would again launch big sales of dollars kept traders nervous.

"The big question hanging over the market is whether central banks will re-enter the market again in a big way," a Frankfurt dealer said. In Tokyo the dollar finished the trading day at 260.05 yen, down from 260.50 yen late Friday. In London, the pound fell to $1.068 from $1.0715 late Friday. Other dollar rates in late Europe an trading compared with late Fri-day were 3.373 Deutsche marks, up from 3.3635; 2.889 Swiss francs, up from 2.8775 and 10.312 French francs, up from 10.265. U.S. Refusal Seen

The United States has refused to join in major currency intervention to drive the dollar down, despite suggestions from the Federal Reserve that such action might be useful, Reuters reported Monday from Washington, quoting administration sources.

Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, last week questioned whether recent sales of dollars by central banks had been forceful enough. But this view is not shared by the administration, the monetary sources say.

Mr. Volcker's remarks provoked market speculation that the United States would join its allies in Europe and Japan in selling huge quantities of dollars to prop up weaker custencies.

But later, when central banks did launch a major assault on the doldollar sales by the Fed were insig-"I don't think you're going to see a change in our behavior that's really substantial," one senior administration source said. But the administration-Fed split is important because it tends to confuse the markets. Moreover, monetary sources say, several U.S. officials believe Mr. Volcker's comments may ultimately undermine efforts to bring the dollar down once the markets realize they do not foreshadow significant U.S.

Supercomputers Are Suddenly Hot

Even Hollywood Has Discovered Speedy Machines

By David E. Sanger New York Times Service NEW YORK - In just the last 18 months, all three of America's largest automakers have installed supercomputers in their design centers, seeking to test-drive their prototypes without ever building them.

Aerospace, chemical manufac turers and even movie companies seeking to create three-dimensional special effects for science fiction films also are buying the machines, which provide far greater computing power than any mainframe computer can de-

Suddenly, supercomputers are hot. This year, Cray Research Inc., Control Data Corp. and a handful of smaller makers of the world's fastest computers will in-stall about 45 new machines — a remarkable number considering that fewer than 120 supercomputers exist in the world.
"It's clear the market is poised for explosive growth, because now it's not just the Defense Department and the universities that are grabbing them up," said Jeffry Canin, an analyst at Ham-brecht & Quist Inc.

The demand has sparked scores of new supercomputer projects, ranging from tiny Sili-con Valley start-ups to a major effort by International Business Machines Corp. Among the most promising entrants: Convex Computer Corp., Scientific Computer Systems Inc. and "There's no question it will be

Icahn Drops Hostile Attempt To Buy Phillips

NEW YORK -- Carl C, Icahn, a New York investor, agreed Mon-day to drop his hostile bid to acquire Phillips Petroleum Co., averting the oil company's second unwelcome takeover assault in less than three months.

The joint announcement of a settlement came after Phillips launched a sweetened, $4.5-billion offer to buy back nearly half of its stock and also disclosed that its shareholders had rejected an earlier recapitalization plan to keep the company independent.

Mr. Icahn, who owns 4.85 percent of Phillips stock, agreed to withdraw his offer of $60 a share for 70 million shares, or 45 percent, of Phillips, which was part of an $8.06-billion bid for the company. On Friday, Phillips stock closed at $49,375. It was up $1,125 to $50.50 a share in heavy trading at midday Monday on the New York Stock Exchange. Mr. Icahn also said that he would not go through with an attempt to unseat the Phillips board and agreed not to launch another bid for Phillips during the next eight years. Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.,

Mr. leahn's financial adviser, agreed not to finance any takeover attempt against Phillips for the next three years, Phillips also said. Both Phillips and Mr. Icahn agreed to dismiss fawsuits filed in the takeover attempt that began Feb. 4. Under terms of the settlement Phillips will pay up to $25 million of Mr. Icahn's expenses.

Mr. Icahn said that his expenses were larger than $25 million and refused to comment on his profit from the transaction. But Wall Street analysts estimated that he earned between $50 million and $60 million before taxes.

In December, Phillips negotiated the settlement of a takeover attempt led by T. Boone Pickens, the chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co.,

LONDON — Armed with a talking horse, three beautiful wom-en and a communications satellite, Rupert Murdoch is zapping the fear of competition into Europe's traditional television broadcasters. The Australian press baron, best known for a newspaper empire that stretches across three continents, also is principal owner of Sky Channel — an English-language elevision network beaming American television programs like "Mr. Ed," a show about a talking horse, and "Charlie's Angels," featuring three female detectives, to cable, systems across Europe. Although only a fraction of En-rope's estimated 100 million television households are now on cable, Sky Channel reaches nearly 3 million viewers and is growing. In the reach more than seven million popast four years, it has become a tential viewers by the end of this medium that has piqued serious advertiser interest while posing thorny challenges for countries that want to continue to strictly regulate the sort of programming their citizens can watch.

"There's no reason why a pan-European entertainment channel shouldn't work, and Murdoch has the lead service in an expanding market," said John Howkins, executive director of the International Institute of Communications in London. If Mr. Murdoch can continue to cable television entrepreneur.

Mr. Cox said he expects Sky to year if it gets permission to link with Belgium's cable systems. Assuming it meets projections. Sky is expected to break even this year on revenue of just under $10 million. "If in five years, we've got 15 milion connections and good rat-ings, this could be a very, very good business for us," Sir James said. Sky Channel was conceived

He figured that television advertisers, frustrated by local advertising restrictions, television. Some advertisers still would leap at the chance to bypass view Sky as an experiment and the tightly controlled national television broadcasters. After considerable bureaucratic wrangling, Mr. Haynes managed to secure a slot on a satellite owned by European postal agencies, and, in 1981, Satellite Television PLC was beaming a few hours of program-ming a day to a handful of cable systems across Europe on an "experimental" basis. Two years and $6 million later, nervous Satellite Television inves-tors decided to turn to someone willing to spend enough to boost the service into profitability - Rupert Murdoch. He paid roughly $8 million for a 65-percent stake in Satellite Television PLC and renamed it Sky Channel. Sky, as the channel is called, poses an interesting set of opportunities and problems for its owner. On one hand, its satellite signal blankets Europe, allowing Sky to about five years ago by Brian reach all the cable systems it needs Haynes, a British television jour- to build the mass audience advertisers desire. On the other hand, if tary on Ted Turner, the American cable systems won't pick up its signals, Sky will have no audience.

luxury and presentation can still be seen today. As Prime Minister and the most powerful man in Saxony for 30 years, he was also successor to August the Strong in his capacity as director of the Meissen manufactory from 1733 until his death in 1763. The king, August III confirmed both in 1737 and 1740 that, as a special favour every piece of china which Bruehl had and was to receive had to be given to the king as a present.

With this generous gesture the foundations were laid for the world's finest and most renowned service. Ordered in 1737 and completed in 1741, this magnificent service consisted of more than 2000 pieces of sculptured ornaments depicting the flora and fauna of the sea. Johann Joachim Kaendler created it assisted by Johann Friedrich Eberlein. According to a note made by Kaendler in January

275 Years of Exquisite Meissen China

Technology cannot replace outstanding features is its artistic hand painting. "Dresden China", "Vieux Saxe", "Porcelaine de Saxe" - these terms are known to lovers of fine china, to collectors of porcelain sculptures, an international high society which is aware that valuable china turns a dull table into a festive one and makes eating a feast. These terms are established names for the china of the crossed blue swords trade mark. Taken from his coat of erms, they are a reminder of the china manufactory's founder, August the Strong. The crossed blue swords are with the Synonymous world-famous Meissen china. Europe's first porcelain manufactory was established in 1710 under the name of "Royal-Polish and Electoral-Saxon Porcelain Manufactory" following a decree issued by August the Strong, Elector of Saxony and King of Poland. This year the Staatliche Porzellanmanufaktur Meissen, which always belonged to the state, first to the king then to the treasury, celebrates its 275th anniversary, a jubilee worthy of such an old and world-renowned manufactory which still adheres to its traditional methods of production. Meissen china, one of whose hand painting, cannot be technologically produced. Every piece leaving the manufactory is an original - unique and of supreme quality. This also determines the top-level circle of customers. In the 18th century European kings and queens bought Meissen exquisite quality of Meissen, ual and the special. Prior to the foundation of the Meissen porcelain manufactory, Johann Friedrich Boettger invented porcelain in Europe in 1708. His javention was long acquiring world fame but Johann Gregorius Hoeroldt developed a wide china, today it is the people of scale of colours and introduca modern world, lovers of the ed them in numerous forms onto the porcelain. Johann Joachim Kaendler world still yearn for the unus-created forms and figures which still delight today. These three important characters devised the traditional methods rigorously employed foundation of the Meissen manufactory 275 years ago. Thus, on the one hand classical creations dating back to the Rococo period abound and, on the other, modern forms and designs.

The Staatliche Porzellanmanufaktur Meissen has a great range of models, styles and long history and still used today.

Many famous museums, including Dresden, Hamburg, Vienna, London, Amsterdam, Munich, Paris and Leningrad consider themselves fortunate to possess a collection of Meissen china. The internationally renowned London auctioneers also value Meissen as a highlight of their porcelain auctions.

Meissen rightly has a reputation as a rare item and it will remain so as the china is produced in a manufactory and this limits production. Thus every connoisseur of Meissen china knows that buying the exquisite porcelain today means possessing the antique

THE INTERHOTEL BELLEVUE

On March 6, 1985 the opening of the Hotel BELLE-VUE, on one of the prettiest parts of the banks of the Elbe, will coincide with the GDR/Japan Economic Committee meeting. Residents of Dresden have watched with excitement this attractive hotel being built between the time-honoured Blockhaus and the Japanese Palace. Of particular interest was the architectural feat which incorporated the historic town house with the two courts of the former Grosse Meissner Strasse into the modern long group of buildings. The cosy rooms, huxurious interior, excellent service and friendly hospitality of its numerous restaurants, combined with a rich touristic program will quickly ensure the international reputation of the Hotel BELLE-VUE, and certainly win new friends for Dresden, its art and culture and magnificent surroundings.

In the hotel's health centre, which is equipped with the most up-to-date gadgets, guests can follow the multistep oxyigen therapies of Prof. M. v. Ardenne as well as the Kneipp cures, medicinal bath physiotherapists are available for guests' medical care.

The fitness club includes a sizeable swimming pool, solarium, ladies' and gents' saunas, bowling alleys and fitness apparatus. Outdoor sports include jogging, tennis and horseriding. World renowned and internationally revered -Musical instruments made in the GDR

Musical instruments made in the GDR enjoy a high reputation worldwide and have won the appreciation and confidence of many music-lovers for their excellent quality.

Upright and grand pianos, historical keyboard instruments, organs, electronic keyboard instruments and amplifiers, accordions, mouth organs, string and plucking instruments, woodwind and brass as well as percussion instruments are supplied to customers in 80 countries in all five continents. Great artists and world-famous orchestras play them in the concert halls, music schools and conservatories the world over. The USA is one of the main overseas trading partners and Hanseatic Overseas Trading Inc. of 212 South Magnolia Avenue, Tampa/Florida 33606 represents the GDR locally. In the mid 17th century the first violins were made in Markneukirchen in the Vogtland and here the foundations were laid for the trument industry of the GDR. Begun more than three centuries ago and handed down from generation to generation, the rich pool experience of the Marknenkirchen string and plucking instrument makers formed an important basis for top quality products. There is a long tradition of wind as well as string instruments, and production for these also started in the Vogtland, at the beginning of the 18th century. All kinds of flutes, picolos, clarinets, bassoons and double-bassoons, oboes and cors anglais are produced. Rigorous

This instrument has been developed and further developed in close cooperation with such famous bassoonists as Prof. Cooper of the University of Michigan. Another interesting product of the wide range of Vog-tland woodwind instruments are recorders made of the best, impregnated wood carrying the labels of Venus, Saturn, Jupiter, Musima, Alexander Heinrich, Werner Schneider or Adler. A wide range of models is on offer, recorders for school and home, chamber orchestra or solo playing. Another hit is the baroque recorder "Meister Werner Schneider" whose wide compass and powerful sound are much admired in the USA. The whole range of brass instruments is produced in the Vogtland area and distributed to 60 countries. The latest model is a 5-valve Ctuba which has aroused considerable international interest and is already played in the USA, in Japan and numerous European countries. It was developed through the close cooperation of tuba players from the

NEW YORK — A decline in the stock market was picking up speed late Monday after a new effort to crack through the 1,300 barrier proved unsuccessful. The Dow Jones industrial average, which gained 15.35 Friday, was down 12.04 to 1,287.32 about an hour before the close. The index retreated a few points in the first hour, started to recover, then went into a new decline.

Declines led advances by a 2-1 ratio among the 1,963 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. The five-hour Big Board volume amounted to about 86.90 million shares, compared with 115.95 million in the corresponding period Friday.

Prices were lower in active trading of American Stock Exchange issues. The Dow index has been over 1,300 a few times since mid-February but on a closing basis the record is Friday's 1,299.36. "There's no rational explanation for the fas-cination with round numbers," said Anthony Tabell of Delafield, Harvey & Tabell, Princeton, New Jersey.

He said that at the moment he would not hazard a guess which way the market was going to go but he said if the Dow falls through the 1,270 area it could wind up as low as 1,240 or 1,225. On the other hand, if it holds above 1,270

Textron Plans to Sell Bell Helicopter

PROVIDENCE, Rhode Island Textron Inc. announced Mon-day it plans to sell its largest sub-sidiary, Bell Helicopter, to cover debts incurred by the conglomerate's $1.4-billion purchase of Avco Corp., the Connecticut defense gi-am, in January. Beverly F. Dolan, president and chief executive of Textron, said the company wants to raise about $1 billion from divestitures. "We have decided to pursue the sale of Bell because the sale would generate significant cash for debt reduction," Mr. Dolan said in a release. "Bell Helicopter has long been an integral part of Textron and this has been a difficult decision to make," Mr. Dolan said.

Textron purchased the three divisions of Bell, based in Fort Worth, Texas, in 1960, Bell, which employs about 7,200 employees, makes a broad range of commercial and military helicopters.

In the 1960s and early 1970s, Bell grew rapidly through huge military contracts during the Vietnam war and from orders for hundreds of helicopters from the shah of Iran. Before the shah died, Bell was the largest employer in that country.

Toward the end of the 1970s, Bell expanded even further as offshore oil drilling boomed and com-panies bought the helicopters to ucis. ferry crews from land to the floating oil rigs. Over the years, Bell has account-just 12 percent of Textron's earnings as offshore oil drilling concerns cut back operations.

According to a Textron spokes-man, Raymond W. Caine Jr., Bell contributed operating income of $28.7 million on revenue of $672 million during 1984, compared with income of $36 million on sales of $540.3 million the year before.

Textron's diverse other divisions include Homelite chain saws, Spcidel watchbands, Jacobsen lawn mowers, Sheaffer Eaton pens and Textron fended off a $1.6-billion takeover bid from Chicago Pacific Corp. in October 1984, and some ed for up to 30 percent of Textron's analysts said at the time that it was earnings. Last year, however, the time for Textron to slim down by three Bell divisions accounted for selling some of its divisions.

This ennouncement appears as a matter of record only.

MERRIMACK, New Hampshire — Digital Equipment Corp. announced Monday a high-end model of its Rainbow personal computer with 640,000 bytes of memory and a 10-million byte hard disk for storage.

Company officials said the new Rainbow 190 system is a "top-of-the-line office work station for personal computing." The product likely will be positioned as part of the company's overall office automation strategy.

All are in beautiful settings and some are beautiful

Settings in themselves.

There are Paradores in ancient castles and convents.
But no matter how old, each offers you all the comforts you expect in a first class hotel.

There are also privately owned hotels in historic buildings throughout Spain. The Hostal de los Reyes Católicos, for example, is one of the architectural treasures of Santiago de Compostela, and is also famed for its collection of period furniture and art. Another such splendid hotel is the famous Hostal of San Marcos in Leon.

You could plan a motor trip that would let you enjoy a different Parador or historic hotel every night.

You would see great cities and small villages, snowy mountains and sunny seaside towns.
And each morning you would enjoy a different scene from your bedroom window. A perfect holiday, in our view.

OPEC Output Seen As Up Last Month

Reuters

LONDON — Oil production by OPEC in February may have passed 16 million barrels per day, the cartel's official ceiling, after falling well below 15 million during January, Petroleum Intelligence Weekly said. The weekly newsletter said the rise in February output came main-ly from Saudi Arabia, Iran and Nigeria. Saudi output was roughly 4 million barrels per day against a deemed quota of 4.35 million, Nigerian production was over 1.5 million barrels per day in February from 1.3 million the previous month, while Iran's output rose to two million barrels per day, it said. The newsletter, published at the

The current account measures trade in goods and services as well as interest, dividends and certain transfers. The agency said a large surplus in foreign trade of mer-chandise more than offset a deficit in trade of service transactions such as tourism, shipping and interest on dividend payments.

The agency said the current-account surplus in the fourth quarter was 810 million Canadian dollars ($581.9 million at current rates). This compared with surpluses of 631 million Canadian dollars in the third quarter and 513 million Canadian dollars in the second quarter.

COT HE ENCHANTRESS" by Han Suyin all it a high-class romance fairy tale, or a historical fantasy, or a romantichistorical fairy tale.

But where does one go from there? How does one equate this silly little story with the Suyin of the "many splendored" love affair that became a best-selling novel and a hit movie? She has written more than 15 books, most of them based on her life as a Eurasian child growing up in China, her experiences as a young Western-educated medical doctor observing the Communist revolution from the Hong Kong border and then returning to the mainland to live, work and write about the aspirations of its people, their high ideals and hopes, along with the pain, the excesses and horrors of the Cultural Revolution.

Granted, the historical details of "The Enchantress" have been meticulously researched.

But it is all for naught, because the plot upon which the whole exotic panorama hinges is almost laughable in its attempt to touch upon every facet of the 18th century, while the characters are no more human than the automata - robots that were the rage of the rich and royal of the day.

EC to Raise Duties on Canada Produce

BRUSSELS - The European Community will raise duties on a range of Canadian farm products in retaliation for Canadian import curbs on its beef and veal, the European Commission said Monday.

The increases will take effect in 30 days unless the dispute is resolved. EC and Canadian officials failed last week to agree on the quantities of beef the EC can export to Canada. Canada set beef import quotas at 66,500 tons this year, but gave the EC just 2,700 tons, down from 23,000 of 613 plate appearances.

For a healthy Kingman, those bonuses are easily attainable. Consider, on the other hand, some of the award bonuses.

Tony Bernazard, who could lose his second-base job in Cleveland to Cory Snyder, a rookie, has clauses that would pay him $25,000 each if he were voted to the All-Star team and if he finished first, second or third in the league's most valuable player voting. > Not so unusual were the contracts signed during the off-season that will guarantee players an anmual average of $1 million or more. Fifteen players attained that plateau this winter.

Bill Candill of Toronto is among those players, and if the $1.5 million annual average of his contract isn't enough, he could pick up as much as $900,000 a year in award bonnses: $200,000 for the Rolaids relief award, $150,000 for the Cy Young award, $150,000 each for being the most valuable player in the league, the playoff and the World Series, $50,000 for the All-Star team and $50,000 for making a postseason all-star team.

Rollie Fingers, another relief pitcher, isn't among the new mil-ion-dollar players, but he will join them belatedly if his back, which was operated on last year, permits him to have a full season. If Fingers, 38 years old, appears in 60 games, which he has done nine times in his career, he would add $950,000 to his $250,000 salary. Once he has pitched in 20 games, he earns $20,000 a game for each

Spaniard Wins Race In Giant Slalom

The Associated Press

VAIL, Colorado - Blanca Fernandez-Ochoa, Spain's one-woman team, shrugged off a knee injury to win her first World Cup victory with two near-perfect giant slalom runs Sunday on Vail Mountain. Fernandez-Ochoa, whose best previous finish in five seasons of World Cup racing was third, was clocked in 1 minute, 12.34 seconds on her first run, giving her a lead of 37-hundredths of a second over Switzerland's Vreni Schneider, with Swiss racer Maria Walliser another nine-hundredths back.

In the second run, Fernandez-Ochoa again set the pace with 1:14.54, for a combined time of 2:26.88. Walliser, second-fastest in the second run, took the silver medal at 2:27.49. Schneider and teammate Zoe Haas shared the bronze with times of 2:28.12, West Germany's Traudi Haecher was fifth in 2:28.57, and Austria's Elisabeth Kirchler sixth in 2:28.72

"Berween runs I just thought about attacking on the second run," said Fernandez-Ochoa, 21. "If you don't attack, you won't win. I skied to win.

"In the first run, I had a little trouble in making smooth turns, but in the second run I felt better. "This win will do my head good. I've been looking for this for two years. Now I feel confident that if I did it soday, I can do it again."

Fernandez-Ochoa, who was operated on last spring, said she may have to undergo surgery on her left knee when the season ends. "The ligament isn't right. My knee doesn't give me many problems, but once in a while it acts up." Fernandez-Ochoa is the sister of the 1972 Olympic slalom gold medalist. Francisco Fernandez-Ochoa. "My brother has been a strong influence on me," she said. "He has helped me train and encouraged

Strange Wins Golf in Sudden Death

CORAL SPRINGS, Florida (UPI) — Curtis Strange sank a three-foot putt for par on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff Sunday to win the Honda Classic golf tournament over Peter Jacobsen.

The playoff was forced when Strange missed a four-foot putt on the 17th hole to drop back into a tie with Jacobsen and then made a six-footer for par on the 18th. He shot a 2-over-par 74 in the final round to complete the 72 holes in the tie with Jacobsen at 13-under-par 275. Jacobsen, playing his first tournament in a month because of pulled muscles in his side, made up six shots in the final round with a 4-under-par 68.

Three shots back, in third place at 10-under-par 278, was Willie Wood, who had a final-round 71. Next at 279 were Raymond Floyd with a 70 and Fred Couples, who had shared the third-round lead with Strange,

Soviet Skater First in Compulsories

TOKYO (UPI) — Alexander Fadeev of the Soviet Union won the men's compulsory figures Monday in the opening event of the world figure skating championships. Fadeev is now in a position of strength for the men's world title, after his main rival, Brian Orser of Canada, finished fourth in the figures. The Soviet skater can place second in both remaining men's events, the long and short programs, and still take the title even if Orser wins both.

Jozef Sabovcik of Czechoslovakia placed second in the figures, and Fernand Fedronic of France was third.

McEnroe Defeats Curren in Houston

HOUSTON (UPI) - Top-seeded John McEnroe captured the Houston Shootout tournament Sunday, defeating Kevin Curren, seeded second, in straight sets, 7-5, 6-1, 7-6.

McEnroe had only one easy set. He avoided a tiebreaker in the first set by breaking Curren's serve in the 12th game, then breezed through the second set. Curren came alive in the third set, winning the first three games, breaking McEnroe for the only time in the match. But McEnroe broke back and an ace in the 12th game forced a tiebreaker, which he

In a women's tournament in Hershey, Pennsylvania, Robin White scored a 6-7, 6-2, 6-2 victory over Anne Minter Sunday. In winning White became the first American in the five-year history of the tournament to capture the championship.

Russian Sets Record in Backstroke

ART BUCHWALD

The Situation Is Taxing

WASHINGTON — Democratic Representative Tender was chuckling.
"What's the joke?" I asked him, as we stood on the steps of the Capitol after lunch.

"They're all coming up here to make their case and get relief." "Who is they?"

The people who voted for Ronald Reagan in November because he promised to cut government spending without raising their taxes. The joke is everyone thought Reagan about the other guy when it Buchwald came to chopping off a federal program. The farmers voted for him because they believed he would eliminate urban transportation subsidies, and the yuppies voted for him because they wanted him to cut agricultural price supports. The conservative students thought his economies had nothing to do with school tuition, and the Republican governors still can't believe the Gipper wants to do away with federal revenue sharing."

"But the president has to cut the budget deficit," I said.

I didn't say he doesn't. All I'm saying is that everybody who voted for him, except for the defense contractors, didn't realize they were on Stockman's hit list. Come over to my office and see what's going on."

We wandered over to the Sam Rayburn Building. Tender pushed through the crowd to his office.

"I make them take a number like you do in a Baskin Robbins ice cream store." He rang for his secretary. "Who's out there this after-

Humidor-Room Closing Ends Cigar Era

By William E. Geist

New York Times Server

New YORK — Housekeepers, messengers, chaufeurs and all manner of hired help are bounding up the plush carpeted statrease at Dunhill's on Fifth Avenue these days discussed forthwith to facet help the days, dispatched forthwith to fetch their employers' cigars.

The Dunhill Humidor Room, where monarchs, presidents, captains of industry and the merely rich have stored their finest cigars for decades, is closing. One does not wish to speak of such indelicate matters as financial affairs, but Alfred Dunhill of London can simply no longer afford to pay the soaring Fifth Avenue rents to store more than 400,000 of its clients cigars.

In the Humidor Room, the private cli-mate-controlled cedar lockers — or "keeps," as they are called — bear such names as President John F. Kennedy, Sir Winston S. Churchill, Alfred Hitchcock and Milton Trouble is, a lot of the clients are dead. Even some of the live ones have not been heard from for decades. The knobs on many of the keeps are coated with years of dust. Meanwhile, the store must deny humidor space to new clients who actually buy cigars.

The store assesses no maintenance charge for this "laying down" of cigars in its humidor, where the temperature is 65 degrees, the humidity is 68 percent and the air is so fresh that Nigel Calladine, the store manager, asks overly perfumed patrons to leave, so as not to contaminate the cigars.

Dunhill recently sent out a third and final letter notifying customers that they must clean out their keeps by the end of the month. "It's the end of an era," said a 66-year-old customer from Far Hills, New Jersey.

David Lee, the altogether proper humidor director, said that a congressman he informed of the closing had been near tears and that about five people had threatened to file suits to stop the closing. "It's more chipping away of the glory, the graciousness that used to be New York," said

Gene Shalit of NBC News, who was in the store to pick up 10 boxes of pre-Castro Cuban cigars that which he had stored there for Others picking up their cigars recalled that the room — which is lined with cedar shipping chests and furnished with leather Chesterfield couches, an Oriental rug and campaign desks - had become something of a men's club, with customers talking sports and business deals while smoking mellow cigars and becoming one with the woodwork. Some napped on the couches.

"That would never happen now," said Calladine, the manager. "Life is too fast-paced." He said the store would give up the 2,500square-foot room, which opened on 42d Street in 1924 and moved to Rockefeller Center in the 1930s. Dunhill's is planning a more compact humidor, with space available only to regular purchasers. "We are trying," he said, noting that expensive cigars are seeing a surge in sales, "to reach the new wave of 35 to 45-year-old heavyweights who see the cigar as a symbol of success."

The Duke of Windsor came here to smoke a cigar on many an occasion," said Lee who noted that some of the duke's cigars were still Dunhill's record-keeping system is a tin of old dog-eared index cards carrying the names, addresses, favorite types of cigars and scrawlings about the purchases and with-drawals of Rothschilds, Rockefellers, du Ponts and even a Caesar (Sid), among hundreds of other notables.

"I wanted to computerize all of this," Lee said, "but a video display terminal just wouldn't do in this room."

Sure enough, under W in the card file is. "Windsor, the Duke of." Under H, "His Grace, the Duke of Marlborough, Blenheim Palace, England, Flor De A. Allones" (his favorite cigar).

Shalit said he did not know what he would do with his cigars. Another customer is solv-ing the problem by splitting them up between the humidors at two of his private New York clubs, the humidors in his homes in New York, Paris and Nantucket and the humidor on his yacht. "A sensible approach," commented Lee.

There used to be six or seven attendants in here to get your cigars," said another customer. David Bernard, "and now there is one. Their whole lives were cigars. Now Dunhill sells clothes, and they have branches where you get some tie salesman who knows nothing about cigars.

"So, they will dismantle the famous Dun-hill Humidor Room and open a smaller one in the store, and two years from now I'll bet you they'll be selling handkerchiefs in there. It's the way of the world." "I feel like hell," said another customer, an imposing silver-haired man who allowed as how he might slip down to the first floor of the store and buy himself a $5,000 crocodile attaché case to cheer himself up.

Women Against Pornography, a U.S. feminist group, have criti-cized Catvin Klein for sexism in an underwear ad featuring a nearly bare-breasted woman in what the group called a "pose straight out of Penthouse." The organization also found a diaper commercial objec-tionable: The group gave one of its "Piggie" awards to a Huggies com-mercial showing babies in a beauty contest, saying the ad presented hittle girls in objectifying cheese-cake poses which ignore the prevalence and seriousness of child molestation.

A disgruntled Chicagoan, newly a millionaire, tried to pay his former wife's divorce lawyer with 750,000 pennies, but a judge told the man to write a check for $7,500 instead.
